Close to the City of Hulst is “Het Verdrongen (Drowned) Land of Saetinghe.” This Nature Reserve is one of the most important salt marsh areas in the Netherlands. It is an area of mud flats, sandbanks and salt marshes, intersected by narrow streams, creating mud galore. Walking here is a true expedition, dredging through mud, bogs and crossing water gullies is all part of it. More on the City of Hulst on pages 22-23.

Beste Medelanders,

Recently the Committee has received very positive feedback from Members in relation to the Dutch historical articles, published in the Neerlandia magazine. Well done Pieter and John for researching and sharing with us Dutch historical facts. Like our readers, I am looking forward to the continuation of these informative articles.

When this magazine comes out, we will have just celebrated "Leidens Ontzet", a function organized by John Zwartkruis. I enjoy learning more about past Dutch events that shaped the nation.

I am very grateful that decisions made by previous Committees have setup our Club in such a financially secure way to allow us to continuously enjoy all our highly sponsored Neerlandia events and outings.

If you have any suggestions or comments about current Neerlandia events or you would like to assist in any future Club event, please do not hesitate to contact either myself or Jan Zwartkruis, our Events Organiser or any of the other Committee Members.

I hope to see many of our Members at the upcoming AGM. The AGM is always a good opportunity to get involved in our Club.

Groeten,
Eric van Waaijenburg.
President.

The Tivoli Theatre Show

THE TIVOLI "JUKE BOX JIVE'N" SHOW IN APPLECROSS ON SUNDAY THE 22ND OF AUGUST 2021.

One quarter of our total Membership was at the Tivoli Show in Applecross, enjoying the non-stop variety performance presented by a cast of 17 dancers, singers and actors. To comply with the COVID-19 regulations, we all sanitised our hands and put our names with contact numbers on the sheets provided. To get us in the spirit of the Jukebox Jive'n Show, the whole cast started on stage singing "Rock around the clock" and "That old time rock and roll". That certainly took us back to the 60's, when that sort of music was in full swing. There was a good mix of tap dancers, 3 comedy acts and some acrobatics by two of the younger Members of the group and it was amazing how every performance followed on from the previous one without a break. And all the costume changes. So fast. Many songs brought back memories, like: "Love is all around, Bye bye love, Why do fools fall in love and Let's go little darling". Than before Intermission they sung: "Oh what a night, Walk like a man and Let's hang on", before the lights came on and the boxes with chicken and chips were served.

The Tivoli Theatre show

During the Intermission the raffle was drawn and 3 Neerlandia Members won a prize; Ann Bogaers, John Otis and Sandra de Lange. The second half of the show opened up with the full cast singing “Oh boy” followed by “Run around Sue” and “Wake up little Susie”. All songs were from the 60’s and it surely brought back many memories.

memories”, where Peter, the young male dancer, joined in with the tap-dancing group. It was fascinating to see and hear how they can keep on tapping with their special shoes on the wooden floor.

And then came the Final Act with all of them singing and dancing; “Hound dog, Be my baby, Do you love me and Hand jive”. It was a great afternoon that was enjoyed by all and brought back memories from the 60’s. Henk Oorschot. (Life Member.)

Then the tap dancers were back dancing “It all is jazz.” I was amazed that some of them were getting on in age and still tap dancing like the young ones. This was followed by “Sweet nothings” followed by “Sweet

This was followed with a comedy of two ladies doing a Sisters act, very funny. The Jazz Dancers were back again with “Stand by me”. The show kept on moving with song and dance acts like “If I had a hammer” and “One fine day” followed by “Jailhouse rock”.

The battles against the water by the Dutch

The Storm-Tide that came during the night.

(A translation of a book by P.A De Rover entitled "In Nacht en Stormgetij".)

The water is coming.

And still

"Leave me alone." Gert called out. He is shaking himself back and forth wildly. That's probably Kees van Bommel again. He is so mean. He always jumps on your back when you are playing in the Church square. Gert has a great disdain for Kees van Bommel. Why is he always pestering us? "Leave me alone!!"

"Well, well" said a voice above him. At once, Gert is wide awake. "Dad" he said: "What's the matter?" He was blinking his eyes against the light that his Dad was holding in his hand. "You have to get out of bed. Come, get up. It is severe weather outside! The Dike!" his Dad told him. At once he could hear the wailing of the storm winds. But this time it was much worse than before. It is as if the whole house was shaking and vibrating. "Is it really that bad, Dad?" asks Gert. "Just listen to the wind."

"Yes, my boy, it is really bad. The Dike watch has issued a warning. Come and quickly get dressed." His Dad didn't need to repeat himself. Gert is already standing next to his bed. He quickly put on his shirt, pants and jumper.

His Dad waited with him with his night-light in his hand. "What is going on with the Dike, Dad?"

"It can breach, my boy, and then we will be deep under water." "But that's not possible Dad. The Dike has never been breached, has it?" "No, but what has never happened before, can happen tonight. It is springtide tonight and the sea is so high that the waves are already going over the dikes here and there. And the dike is at its weakest on the inside." This serious tone of his Dad's voice, Gert had never heard before.

When Gert comes downstairs, he sees Neeltje sitting on her chair. Her eyes looked big in her white face. She is shaking despite having her big coat on. Mum was busy dressing Mientje. The little girl was crying. Gert looks at the clock. "Quarter to five" he says. So, he has slept for quite some time.

"I am going to warn Onwijn, Mother. We have to try and get the livestock to the dike. the Father lit his Storm Lantern and walks to the door. "I am coming Dad." said Gert. "No boy, you stay here. You go and untie the cows and horses." The Father opens the door, but the wailing storm rips the door out of his hands. The door is now open wide. De dark night is now full of din and noise.

"It is severe weather" the Father said, but his voice is lost because of the roaring wind. Father managed to close the door again. Now he is standing alone with his Storm Lamp in that big threatening darkness. He tried to wrestle against the storm gusts, which almost got the better of him. In the distance is a light, Onwijn lives there. A little further he sees a few more lights. They are the Dike-Watch. Then, all at once, the light from Onwijn was gone. He heard a dull thud, as if something collapsed. A very heavy rustle Father stood and listened. He heard a horrible screech above the raging storm gusts. The lights on the dike were moving quickly now as if they were fleeing. Then Father knew straight away. The Dike!

He runs home, pulls open the door and calls out, "The dike has breached! Everyone to the attic. Quickly. Where is Gert?" "He is untying the livestock"

Mother calls out. Father sprints to the stables. "Go inside Gert, to the attic," he gasped. Gert was heavily shaken by the strange tone in his Father's voice. "Dad? What?" Gert calls out: "Hurry up, go on, up to the attic." Shouted his Father.

And immediately he cut the ropes with which the cows were fastened. Gert has hardly got away when the stable was hit by a tremendous gush of water. Oh, that new stable that was built only last year. The walls were vibrating but didn't give way. The Father kept working feverishly. Then another gush of water heavier than before and a door was ripped from its hinges. The water Wolf entered with raging speed. Father kept working in despair. The water crept up to his leg, higher and higher.

"Oh, he cried out, I can't any longer." As quickly as he could, he splashed through the water to the door of the living room. The cattle were mooing and the horses neighing in deadly fear. Then a third wave. When the Father turned around, he saw the back wall of the stable implode.

The battles against the water by the Dutch

At once, there was a lot of banging and raging around the stable. He ripped the door open, if nailed to the floor, he stood there. The side wall was ripped away by something heavy that had been swept up against it. Over and above the noise of the raging water was the noise of the calling livestock. The Father slapped his hands in front of his face. Above all the banging and screaming of the livestock and the raging noise of the water, he heard a sharp shrieking voice that called; "HELP". And then it was gone.

"Father, come upstairs!" the Mother called out, standing halfway down the stairs. The Father staggers inside. In the living room a light is still on. The water is rising in here as well. It is coming through the floor, through the door, through the kitchen, it's rising and rising Father staggers towards the staircase but remains standing at the bottom. It is as if he doesn't want to go upstairs. The heart wrenching mooing of the cattle has ceased. Now there is only the howling of the storm and the raging of the water that shoots past the house and drags everything along with it that stands in its way. "All the cattle have drowned, everything, everything," the Father groans.

"Come on, come upstairs." Mother begs of her husband. "We are still here." It is as if these words bring Father to his senses. Slowly he goes up the stairs. The water follows him eagerly. "Did you hear that shout for help just then?" Mother asked. "Onwijn," Father said in a dull voice. Gert is shivering. Then Onwijn has drowned, he thought, dragged along by that turbulent water. Or maybe it was Dirk, or his Mother or his little Sister. "The dike must have breached close to his home," Father said.

For a while they sit quietly together listening to the roar of the wind and the rushing of the water that is racing past their home. A very loud bang against the wall of the kitchen shook them all awake. A heavy cracking noise followed by a big dull splash, as if a heavy load of bricks fell into the water. It looks as if the house will be pushed aside. Gert groans. Neeltje calls out crying: "Mum! Mum!" as she buries her head in her Mother's lap. Her Mother places her hand reassuringly on her head. "Hush now!" she says. "Hush now. It has passed already. I am sure it was a tree that was hit up against our house. Hush now. The Lord Jesus is with us." But the Mother's hand was shaking. "But Mum, what if we drown just like Onwijn," Neeltje sobbed. "Well, then you know where we will be going dear child." "But I don't want to drown." Sobbed Neeltje. "Let us pray Neel. Maybe the Lord will hear us."

The water keeps rising. Every now and then, Father looks through the trap door for the staircase with his lantern. Gert is on his knees next to him. They had seen how the table and chairs had been lifted up by the water and were now adrift. They had heard how Mother's beautiful mahogany linen cupboard fell over. They heard how the water, that squalid, dirty, muddy water extinguished the fire in Mother's beautiful heater. The heater that Mother had lit for the very first time this winter. Gert saw how the organ, the organ on which he learned to play, was lifted up slowly and then toppled over into the water. Tears came to Gert's eyes. His organ, his beautiful organ with sixteen registers. He had received lessons from Mr. Schout, who also plays the organ in Church. Everything is being destroyed by that squalid sea water, everything. No chair, table, no heater or cupboard, no organ, nothing stays intact. Nothing! First all the livestock drowned. Now all the furniture is destroyed. Oh, how hard Gert wanted to shout out! But what good will it do?

(translated from Dutch and sent in by Jan Zwartkruis - to be continued in the November issue)

An interesting fact.

At the 52nd Anniversary Lunch, one question posed has resulted in a protest. The question was; - What animal can clean its own ears with its tongue?

The acceptable answer was Giraffe. After investigation, it is now confirmed that not only the Giraffe but also the endangered species Okapi can clean its own ears with its tongue. Whilst this would not have changed the result in the eventual winners, it is worthy to correct this answer.

Indeed, many references exist, stating that only Giraffes were able to clean their ears with their tongue. Obviously, these many references all overlooked the Okapi.

For all of you, below are the details of the endangered Okapi. If you would like to know more, follow these links.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Okapi>

<https://naturescrusaders.wordpress.com/2008/11/24/threatened-okapis...>

<https://www.onlinemathlearning.com/animalfacts-okapi.html>

Picture by Alan Eng, taken in the Brussels Zoo, Belgium.

Is the Okapi a horse, a zebra or neither?

An Okapi is neither a horse nor a zebra; its nearest relative is the giraffe. The body shape is similar to that of the giraffe, except that okapis have much shorter necks.

Both species have very long (approx. 30 cm or 12 inch), flexible, blue tongues that they use to strip leaves and buds from trees. The tongue of an Okapi is long enough for the animal to wash its eyelids and clean its ears; it is one of the few mammals that can lick its own ears. It's habitat is what was formerly called the "Belgian Congo."

Okapis have dark backs, with striking horizontal white stripes on the front and back legs, making them resemble zebras from a distance. These markings are thought to help young follow their mothers through the dense rain forest; they also serve as camouflage. An Okapi is also known as the Forest Giraffe, Congolese Giraffe, or Zebra Giraffe.

The Card Club enjoyed Lunch at the Pines

On Tuesday the 7th of September it was the Card Club's turn to visit the Bentley TAFE Training Restaurant "The Pines", when 20 Members visited there for Lunch. And what an enjoyable after noon it was. After a miserable cold start to spring, we enjoyed a sunny day, it got close to 30 degrees.

With Covid - 19 restrictions disrupting the arrival of overseas students, it was up to the remaining Australian students to stand up and take over. That they did superbly as the food served up by them (a three-course meal) was absolutely outstanding.

With a few drinks supplied from their well-stocked bar, everyone was in a jolly mood and was having a ball.

Towards the end a trolley came around from the bakery with sumptuous cakes, which could be purchased for a small price.

After that it was time to go and everyone left with a smile on their face. All in all it was a great success and many thanks must go to Neerlandia Committee for sponsoring this excellent event.

The Sunday Klaverjas Drive Results.

On Sunday 12 September the monthly Klaverjas Drive took place. It was held in the Edelweiss Hall as the Karl's Bar area was used by Members of the Pistol Club.

Seventeen people were present, enough for 4 tables and one player would have to miss out. This was soon solved as Jan Zwartkruis and Piet Leeftang decided to play together with 2 games each.

On arrival, the players settled down with a cup of Coffee and a Stroop Wafel and at 10.30 the competition started in earnest.

After 4 games, interrupted by lunch, the scoresheets started to come in, they were checked and the winners were decided.

The scores were not as high as usual but about 6 players were within 200 points of one another.

The winners were:

Our Juniors: Ice Biking & Skating event.

Neerlandia Junior Club Ice Biking and Skating.

On Sunday the 29th of August the Neerlandia Junior Club spent a fun afternoon at the Cockburn Ice Arena and had a terrific day trying out an Ice Bike and Skating Combo day. It was almost four years to the day that the Neerlandia Junior Club had its first Ice Skating event at this arena on Sunday, 13 August 2017. Over the past few years we have visited several Ice Arena Centres in order to cater for our North and South of the river Members.

However, this was a special event which started off with a 25 minute Ice Biking session, followed by a two hour Skating session. We were happy to see many familiar faces as well as a number of new faces that participated, we had close to thirty people.

There were only a maximum of 10 Ice Bikes available during the session, which meant a few kind hearted participants amongst us were very happy to share their Ice Biking time with others, so that more people got to enjoy this new activity, it all worked out very well.

We will surely repeat this very successful event and also wish to thank Neerlandia for their support. Please enjoy the pictures taken by several people.

Machiel.

Ice biking for all age groups. They were skidding, sliding and racing. A lot of fun for our Orange gang.

It was a very close and interesting competition, the lead changing many times and more than half the players had a very good chance to get amongst the prizes.

There were also some very interesting statistics worth mentioning.

1. Piet Segers was well out in front, after he made an excellent score of over 6000 points, with only two weeks to go! Then he went away on holidays and only got the customary 8000 points over those 2 weeks, but he still managed to land the third prize.
2. The almost identical thing happened with the Marsen Prize, as he just fell short as well.
3. At the finish there was only a difference of 5 points between the second and third placegetters. And the 4th placegetter, Jan Zwartkruis, was only 10 points further back, but he missed out altogether.
4. Three players finished equal with 19 Marsen (and another 4 players finished on 18 Marsen), but only 2 did receive a prize.
5. The Average prize. The third closest player won the prize money.

Would you like to know why?

The Club has a rule that states that any player can only win one prize per competition!!

In an Irish Court.

An Irish farmer named Paddy had an accident. He and his cow were hit by a truck owned by the Eversweet Company. He sued for damages and grievous injuries.

In court, the Eversweet Company's hot-shot lawyer was questioning Paddy: "Didn't you say to the police at the scene of the accident, I'm fine", asked the company's lawyer.

Paddy responded: "Well, I'll tell you what happened. I'd just loaded my fav'rit cow, Bessie, into da..."

"I didn't ask for any details", the lawyer interrupted. "Just answer the question. Did you not say, at the scene of the accident, I'm fine!"

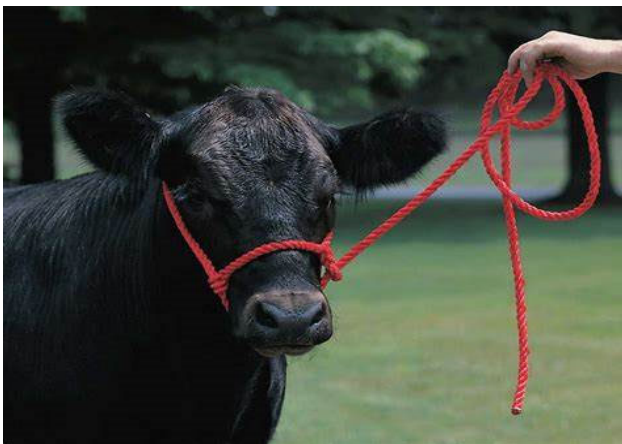

Paddy said, "Well, I'd just got Bessie into da trailer and I was drivin' down da road...."

The solicitor interrupted again and said: "Your Honor, I am trying to establish the fact that, at the scene of the accident, this man told the police on the spot that he was fine. Now several weeks after the accident, he is in court suing my client. I believe he is a fraud. Please tell him to simply answer the question."

By this time, the Judge was fairly interested in Paddy's answer and said to the lawyer: "I'd like to hear what he has to say about his favorite cow, Bessie. He may answer."

Paddy thanked the Judge and proceeded.

"Well as I was saying, I had just loaded Bessie, my fav'rit cow, into de trailer and was drivin' her down the road, when this huge Eversweet truck and trailer came tundering tru a stop sign and hit me trailer right in da side. It were a terrible crash! I was trown into one ditch and Bessie was trown into da udder ditch. By Jaysus I was hurt, very bad like and I didn't want to move at all. And, I could hear poor old Bessie moanin' and groanin'. I knew she was in terrible pain just by her groans."

"Shortly after da accident, a policeman on a motorcycle turned up. He could hear Bessie moanin' and groanin' too, so he went over to her. After he looked at her and saw her condition, he took out his gun and shot her between the eyes. Kilt her dead! Den da policeman came across de road, gun still in his hand, looked at me, and said: "How are you feelin'?"

'Now wot da frickin hell would you say?'

You are just like Frank.

A man walks to the street and catches a taxi just going by. He gets into the taxi, and the cabbie says: "Perfect timing. You're just like Frank."

Passenger: "Who?"

Cabbie: "Frank Feldman ... He's a guy who did everything right all the time. Like my coming along when you needed a cab, things happened like that to Frank Feldman every single time."

Passenger: "There are always a few clouds over everybody."

Cabbie: "Not Frank Feldman. He was a terrific athlete. He could have won the Grand Slam at tennis. He could golf with the pros. He sang like an opera baritone, and danced like a Broadway star."

Passenger: "Sounds like he was something really special."

Cabbie: "There's more. He had a memory like a computer. He remembered everybody's birthday. He knew all about wine, which foods to order, and which fork to eat them with. He could fix anything. Not like me — I change a fuse, and the whole street blacks out. But Frank Feldman, he could do everything right."

Passenger: "Wow, some guy then."

Cabbie: "He always knew the quickest way to go in traffic and avoid traffic jams. Not like me, I always seem to get stuck in them. But Frank, he never made a mistake, and he really knew how to treat a woman and make her feel good. He would never answer her back, even if she was in the wrong; and his clothing was always immaculate, shoes highly polished too. He was the perfect man! He never made a mistake. No one could ever measure up to Frank Feldman."

Passenger: "An amazing fellow. How did you meet him?"

Cabbie: "Oh, I never actually met Frank. He died, and I married his bloody widow ..."

Brian paints lines on the road.

Brian is hired to paint lines on the road. The first day Brian paints 2 kilometres of the road, and the boss is very impressed.

The second day he paints 1km of road, the boss is wondering why it's less than the day before, but gives him a chance.

The third day he only paints 500m of road and the boss is not happy, but he is a forgiving guy and decides to give Brian one more day.

The fourth day he only paints 250m of road and the boss calls him to a meeting.

"Brian, the first day you painted 2km of road, how come you only painted 250m today?"

"But boss, the distance to my paint bucket gets longer and longer every day."

Jack and Jill are getting married.

As Jack was marrying Jill, his father gave him some advice.

"Son, when I got married to your mother, the first thing I did, when we got home, was strip her naked, take off my pants... Then, I gave them to your mother and told her to try them on, which she did. They were huge on her and she said that she couldn't wear them because they were too large. I said to her: "Of course they are too big for you, I wear the pants in this family and I always will." Ever since that day, Son, we have never had a single problem."

Jack took his dad's advice and did the same thing to his wife on his wedding night.

Then, Jill took off her panties and gave them to Jack.

"Try these on," she said. Jack went along with it and tried them on, but they were far too small.

"What's the point of this? I can't get into your panties," said Jack.

"Exactly," Jill replied: "And if you don't change your attitude, you never will!"

I am a keen pianist too!

A good-looking man knocks off work and heads home. It's a foul night, with rain bucketing down, lightning flashing and thunder crashing.

He sees a woman on the side of the road, bonnet up, peering into the engine bay of her car. He stops to see if he can help.

He soon realises the car's electrics have been doused with water. Taking a can of WD40, he sprays everything. When he tries the ignition, the motor starts.

They are both drenched and the young woman says she lives not all that far away.

"You should come to my place and dry off before you head home," she says.

He follows her to a lovely suburban home and goes inside with her. As they enter the lounge, he sees a Steinway grand piano.

"Oh, I'm a keen pianist," she explains. He replies that he, too, is a pianist.

She directs him to an ensuite. He takes off his wet clothes, passing them out past the door so she can put them through her clothes dryer.

He dons a dressing gown hanging on the back of the door and returns to the lounge.

The young woman also comes back to the lounge. She looks totally ravishing clad in a sheer negligee and nothing else.

"Do you like to play," she asks? He steps straight up to the piano and begins a performance of Rach 2.

Hulst, the most Flemish City in the Netherlands

Flag & Coat of Arms of Hulst.

The City of Hulst is located in the South of the Province of Zeeland, a Province in the South-West of the Netherlands.

It is situated in the region Zeelandic-Flanders, on the Dutch-Belgian border, which is connected by land only to Belgium. That is the reason the locals call it the most Flemish City in the Netherlands.

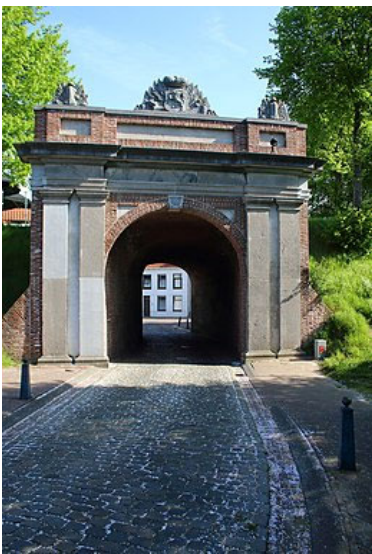

The Drowned Land of Saeftinghe (Verdronken land van Saeftinghe) is a nature reserve in the North of the Municipality. It's name refers to the Saeftinghe legend, which was featured a couple of month ago in this magazine.

Hulst is a fortified Town.

The City, including Absdale, had 10,985 inhabitants (1 January 2021), making it the sixth largest City in Zeeland, behind Middelburg, Vlissingen, Goes, Terneuzen and Zierikzee. The Burgundian lifestyle of the City of Hulst in particular, attracts a vast number of Flemish tourists. The original dialect of Hulst and the surrounding (Catholic) Villages deviates strongly from the other Zeeland dialects and resembles the dialects in the North of Waasland, a Belgium Province of East Flanders. Hulst is only about 30 km from Antwerp.

History:

Hulst originated in the 11th century as the settlement called Hulust. Hulst received City rights from the Flemish Count Philip of Alsace in 1180 and the City developed into an important fortified Port. The important strategic location of Hulst meant that several bordering Countries vied to take control of it.

The Ghentse Poort
(Gate) part of the

In 1453, during the Ghent Revolt, the City was almost completely destroyed. From 1453 -1477 the ramparts and gates were fortified, but the people of Ghent again burned the City in 1485 and 1491.

In 1591, Maurice van Nassau, later Prince of Orange, captured the City within five days. Five years later, another siege took place, with Hulst being recaptured by Albert of Austria .

From 1615 - 1621, the Spanish ruled the City and they made more extensive fortifications that can still be seen today.

Building outside this fortress belt was not permitted, but in 1816 the fortress was disbanded and in 1845 it was bought by the City and remained intact. It was not until after 1860 that any buildings outside the fortress belt began to develop.

Commerce:

In the early days, the Saxvliet was the main entrance to the harbour. The City flourished due to the presence of the harbor as well as the moorings that were available North of the City.

After the surrounding area was inundated by water in 1585, the Hellegat eroded and became the new Harbour. However, this in turn closed in 1795 as the Hellegat had silted up.

Tourism:

During the liberation of Hulst during world war 2 in 1944, the St. Willibrordus Basilica lost its spire. This was later replaced by a concrete structure. The main Church in the middle of Town was voted as the nation's most beautiful Church.

Being very close to the Belgian border (just 3 km), the Town has a lot of influence (and visitors) from Flanders. Its border location, cosy atmosphere and nearby beaches attract lots of day-trippers. Hulst is still missing from the average guidebook and thus very authentic, with very few foreigners (other than Belgians) having already discovered this hidden gem. On sunny summer days, Perkpolder Beach is packed with locals and visitors alike. The beach bar cannot handle such mass invasions of people, it has an outside counter and lets people take their drinks and sprawl out on the dyke or on the beach.

There is a general sense of anarchy on the beach, and enforcement of coronavirus rules is non-existent.
